Such restraint and simplicity is typical of Madame de la Tour du Pin's memoirs. Living through the most turbulent period in modern history, she frankly and unaffectedly records what went on around her--the execution of many of her aristocratic friends; her own flight to Holland, England, America; her last years in Italy; the deaths of her husband and her daughter before her own at the great age of 83.

Mme. de La Tour du Pin wrote these memoirs between 1820 and 1853, yet her early impressions Of Marie Antoinette (edgy, unhappy, "knowing only how to express displeasure, not to act"), Talleyrand, Napoleon, La Fayette, etc. are fresh, curiously convincing and written sharply from personal engagement. The story of her immediate family's escape from the Revolution is a painful recital of dazed movement, hairbreadth rescues and terrifying rumbles in the night.

Jeanne de Valois-Saint-Rémy, self proclaimed 'Comtesse de la Motte' was a notorious French adventuress and thief; she was married to Nicholas de la Motte whose family's claim to nobility is dubious. She herself was an impoverished descendant of the Valois royal family through an illegitimate son of King Henry II. She is known for her prominent role in the Affair of the Diamond Necklace, one of many scandals that led to the French Revolution and helped to destroy the monarchy of France.

Françoise-Alhénéais de Rochechouart de Mortemart, Marquise of Montespan, better known as Madame de Montespan, was the most celebrated maîtresse-en-titre of King Louis XIV of France, by whom she had seven children. Born into one of the oldest noble families of France, the House of Rochechouart, Madame de Montespan was called by some the "true Queen of France" during her romantic relationship with Louis XIV, due to the pervasiveness of her influence at court during that time. Her so-called ...
