Unanswered Threats A Neoclassical Realist Theory of Underbalancing Randall L. Schweller During the late 1630s, Charles I concentrated his energies on the construction of a new royal palace at Whitehall. Designed in the classical style by John Webb, the new Whitehall was to be the fulfillment of the king's lifelong dream to replace the sprawling Unanswered Threats: A Neoclassical Realist Theory of ...

Consistent with the new wave of neoclassical realist research, Unanswered Threats offers a theory of underbalancing based on four domestic-level variables — elite consensus, elite cohesion, social cohesion, and regime/government vulnerability — that channel, mediate, and redirect policy responses to external pressures and incentives. The theory yields five causal schemes for underbalancing behavior, which are tested against the cases of interwar Britain and France, France from 1877 to ...

Unanswered Threats: Political Constraints On The Balance ...
Schweller complements this approach with a theory of foreign policy that can explain state strategies and variations in national responses to similar systemic pressures. Thus, Unanswered Threats examines how the internal structures of states affect policy responses. Schweller drops the neorealist assumption that all states have the same extractive capacity and instead explores the question of why some states are better than others at recognizing external threats and at mobilizing resources ...

Unanswered Threats: Political Constraints on the Balance of Power by Randall L. Schweller. Princeton University Press (2006) One of the fundamental predictions of structural realist theory is the balance of power thesis, or the idea that states will balance against their neighbors' threatening and dangerous over-accumulation of power by building or otherwise acquiring arms or by forging ...

Consistent with the new wave of neoclassical realist research, Unanswered Threats offers a theory of underbalancing based on four domestic-level variables--elite consensus, elite cohesion, social cohesion, and regime/government vulnerability--that channel, mediate, and redirect policy responses to external pressures and incentives.

Unanswered Threats: Political Constraints on the Balance ...
Randall Schweller, professor of political science at Ohio State University, claims in Unanswered Threats, his valuable new book, that a combination of domestic political constraints serves to blind the underbalancing power to the threat posed by the disruptive state. Schweller's book is in many ways a neoclassical realist critique of structural realism, and he does not often attempt to disguise his impatience with the reductionist tendencies of the latter.
