On Easter Monday, 30 March 1972, the North Vietnamese launched a nation-wide offensive that stunned both the South Vietnamese and the Americans by its magnitude. Carried out on three different fronts, it was a multi-divisional effort supported by hundreds of tanks! Thus began one of the fiercest campaigns of the Vietnam War, but also one of the less well-documented due to the fact that most of the American forces had gone home.

W. R. Baker The Easter Offensive of 1972, coming at the end of the Vietnam War, is usually an afterthought in most histories of the conflict, primarily because most U.S. troops had already left the country. This does a great disservice to the American and South Vietnamese militaries who remained, particularly to those killed or wounded in-action.
